"Who was George Stevens?" asks John Drew as he looks at the tombstone unearthed by one of his bulldozers at the site of the Maplecroft Shopping Center in Cheshire Tuesday.

'Dozer Digs Tombstone At Shopping Center Site

CHESHIRE — A tombstone unearthed by a bulldozer at the Maplecroft Shopping Center Tuesday has sent local historians searching through the town records to discover who George Stevens was and where he lived.

A worker employed by the John P. Drew Excavating Company turned up the Italian marble slab inscribed "To the Memory of George Stevens, died July 27, 1833" while preparing the land adjacent to the shopping center for future expansion.

"The wording on the stone is unusual," Mrs. Robert Craig, one of the curators of the local historical museum said. "It is possible he was lost at sea and was not actually buried here."

Town Clerk Warren Hall has found deeds in the name of George Stevens dating back to 1814 but none of them seem to cover the land on which the stone was found, but the number and size of transactions indicate he was a man of means.

Patrolman Lawrence Wild, a policeman with an interest in history, assisted Hall in looking up records and they say the last entry relating to Stevens was by the executor of his estate, Titus L. Gaylord, who transferred 63 acres of land in 1833 to a William Andrews, 2nd, but it was not the land in question.

The earliest records of the shopping center acreage appear in 1851 when Charles Shelton sold a three-acre piece to Michael Gard.

It is thought the stone was originally placed in a private burial grounds and the search is continuing today to learn more about George Stevens.

Another search through the records involving an isolated grave in the path of bulldozers removing fill is also under way in the Town of North Branford. Until a qualified relative of the small-pox victim who was buried there in 1874 is found, excavation is going on all around the grave, off Route 80 in North Branford.
